NYC leaders want anti-terror funds restored

Urban cities like New York City rely on the funds to support terrorism prevention and preparedness.

ANGY ALTAMIRANO
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

New York City officials are voicing outrage over the federal government's slashing of funds for anti-terrorism measures.

Mayor Bill de Blasio, Sen. Charles Schumer and commissioners for the city's NYPD, FDNY and Emergency Management all called on Congress Wednesday to fully restore funding to the Urban Areas Security Initiative (UASI) program.

Under the UASI, urban areas — which are high-threat and high-density cities — are provided assistance to build sustainable capacity to prevent, protect against, alleviate, respond to and recover from any acts of terrorism.

"Anti-terror funding is no place to cut corners. It is no secret that New York City is one of the world's top terror targets — and the Urban Area Security Initiative helps ensure that we will be prepared for whatever dangers arise," de Blasio said. "As a city and as a nation, we cannot afford to lose this essential funding at a time when we face increased threats."

Wednesday's call comes after the announcement that under the president's request for Fiscal Year 2017, UASI was recommended for a national funding of $330 million — close to $300 million less than the $600 million during the year before.

"To cut funding — for a city the entire federal government acknowledges is the top terror target — is indefensible."
Police Commissioner Bill Bratton

New York City itself is expected to have about half of its funds cut, according to ABC.

"With ISIS-inspired attacks and terrorism on the rise all across the globe, we must make sure that America has the resources it needs to remain protected," Schumer said. "It makes no sense for the administration to slash critically needed anti-terrorism funding, especially at a time when we are all on high alert."

The UASI is part of three interconnected grant programs — together with the State Homeland Security Program and Operation Stonegarden — which make up the Homeland Security Grant Program.

According to the officials, UASI allows urban cities like New York City — which remains a top terror target — to maintain terrorism prevention and response infrastructure.

In New York City, officials have used part of the funding to support First Responder Training efforts such as the FDNY's Tiered Response Training and the NYPD's Counter-Terrorism Training, which included an active shooter course.

The funding has also gone toward coordinated regional planning exercises throughout the city and Ground Law Enforcement Security Measures — which include "heavy weapon teams" who conduct patrols at airports, bridges, transit hubs, subways, waterways and highly visited landmarks.

Serial subway thief arrested, targeted sleeping passengers

People doze on the F train. GETTY IMAGES

Police have arrested a man they say is a chronic subway thief preying on sleeping passengers.

Harlem resident Sidney Phifer, 72, was arrested Saturday when officers saw him walking between train cars, the New York Daily News reported. He had previously been arrested more than a dozen times for stealing items from sleeping subway riders.

NYPD Transit Chief Joseph Fox praised officers Timothy Trotter and Higinio Macias for the arrest, saying they nabbed a chronic subway criminal, the Daily News added.

The arrest came on the heels of a newly refocused emphasis on subway crime after the city suffered a recent rash of slashings, and subway crimes were reportedly up 36 percent from last January, according to NY1.

"Subways are not for sleeping. I know a lot of people are tired. They work very hard. But our officers are going to be instructed to start waking people up. Seriously," Police Commissioner William Bratton said to NY1.

Phifer began his subway criminal activity in the early '80s when he was paroled from prison for a robbery, and he began targeting sleeping commuters, officials said to the Daily News. Over the next 35 years, nearly all of his arrests took place in the subway system. METRO

Lost wallet returned along with honest note

Reilly Flaherty's story went viral after he shared a hilarious, anonymous note on social media.

JASON NUCKOLLS
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

A New York City man had most of the contents of his lost wallet returned, but the note that came with his belongings is now getting plenty of attention on social media.

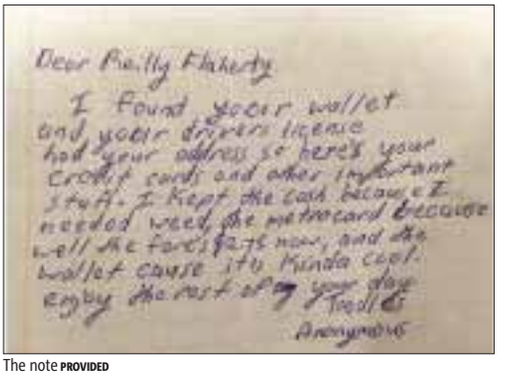
Reilly Flaherty lost his wallet at a Wilco concert at the Kings Theatre in Brooklyn a few weeks ago, NBC reported. Two weeks later, he received an envelope with some of the contents of his wallet and a note explaining why everything was not returned.

"I kept the cash because I needed weed, the MetroCard because, well, the fare's $2.75 now, and the wallet 'cause it's kinda cool," the note, signed by Anonymous, was quoted by USA Today.

"I've never been so conflicted about a nice gesture," Flaherty said to USA Today. "I had already gone to get a new license, and had already gotten all my cards replaced. … So basically it was useless to me."

Flaherty told NBC that he appreciates the humor of the note despite that the anonymous sender is technically a thief.

"If nothing else, it's something me and my friends have laughed about quite a bit," he said to NBC, which also reported that the Kings Theatre has offered Flaherty tickets to an upcoming show for his troubles.



Dear Reilly Flaherty
I found your wallet
and your drivers license had your address so here's your credit cards and other important stuff. I kept the cash because I needed weed, the metrocard because well the fare is $2.75 now, and the

Paid family leave in NY gaining momentum

Samantha DiGennaro, CEO and founder of DiGennaro Communications, supports the family leave legislation. HANNAH MATTIX

The legislation would give state workers up to 12 weeks of benefits and up to 75 percent of their current salary to care for a child or sick family member.

ALAN KRAWITZ
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

With the recent passage of paid family leave legislation in the state's Assembly, which would provide all workers with three months of job-protected leave, advocates across the state are hoping this will be the year New York joins other states in enacting a paid family leave law.

The legislation would give all state workers up to 12 weeks of benefits and between 50 and 75 percent of their current salary to care for a newborn or adopted child or to care for a seriously ill family member.

Workers on such leave would also have their jobs protected.

The program, as currently structured, would be funded entirely through employee payroll deductions. Current Federal Family and Medical Act (FMLA) leave in the state is unpaid.

To become law, the bill must be passed in the Senate and then signed by Gov. Andrew Cuomo.

"I am optimistic it will be 2016," said Samantha DiGennaro, CEO of public relations firm DiGennaro Communications. "As a business owner, I see the impact this could have on our bottom line, but I think the value for New York workers everywhere far outweighs the costs," DiGennaro said.

Opposition to paid family leave persists in the business community, but labor and employment attorney Thomas Wassel believes attitudes toward paid family leave are changing for the better.

"It is likely that these types of state laws will become more prevalent over time," he said. "Whether Congress can agree on a nationwide policy, in light of the partisan gridlock which exists, remains to be seen."

BRIEF

Chick-fil-A set to open second Manhattan location this spring

Popular fast-food chicken eatery Chick-fil-A has announced the opening of their second full-service New York City restaurant, scheduled to open in April.

Saturday, April 2, will mark the arrival of the new Chick-fil-A at West 46th Street and Sixth Avenue near Rockefeller Center, the company has stated. The full-service restaurant will be aimed at serving a high volume of customers and will be open from 6:30 a.m. to midnight, Monday through Saturday.

The company has also described some unique plans to heighten the eatery's efficiency, including having employees take orders from customers in line via tablet. Chick-fil-A said that this will allow people to get their order within eight minutes of entering the restaurant.

Like its current location at 37th Street and Sixth Avenue, the new Chick-fil-A will donate its surplus food to New York Common Pantry, to which it has donated more than 1,500 pounds of food since the 37th Street restaurant opened in October 2015. JASON NUCKOLLS

Alleged auto theft crew stole $200K in street-race cars: Cops

Wednesday's indictment is the result of a comprehensive investigation. GETTY IMAGES

Authorities put the brakes on a group of alleged auto-theft crewmembers who were indicted Wednesday for allegedly stealing dozens of vehicles off the streets.

Queens District Attorney Richard A. Brown identified the two main members of the alleged theft ring as Queens residents Everald "Rambo" Ivey, 27, and Cashawn "CC" Lee, 31.

The two individuals, along with four others, face a 71-count indictment charging them with grand larceny, criminal possession of stolen property, illegal possession of a vehicle identification number and conspiracy.

According to prosecutors, the five men and one woman are being charged for allegedly being part of an auto-theft crew that stole about 27 vehicles of numerous makes, models and years.

Authorities said the group focused on vehicles that are commonly used for street racing, such as Hondas, Acuras, Nissans, Mitsubishis and Mazdas. In one instance, a Kawasaki motorcycle was also taken. All the vehicles and motorcycle were valued at about $200,000.

The theft ring allegedly focused their efforts on stealing vehicles from streets in Queens and also in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, prosecutors said. To carry out what authorities called "their scheme," once the individuals spotted a vehicle to their liking they would allegedly use Google Maps' drop pin feature on their smartphones to jot down the location.

The information would then be sent via text message to other members of the crew, who would later steal the vehicle, according to authorities.

The vehicle would then be taken to a holding spot to determine if it was equipped with LoJack, authorities said. Once it was deemed safe, the vehicle would be stripped of valuable parts — which were listed for sale on Craigslist and other websites.

Queens has seen a significant drop in car thefts in the past two decades, with about 52,000 vehicles stolen in 1991 to 2,200 in 2015, police said.

Couple stakes claim to record Powerball jackpot

Powerball GETTY IMAGES

A Florida couple claimed their share of last month's record $1.6 billion Powerball lottery jackpot Wednesday, coming forward with the second of the three winning tickets.

David Kaltschmidt and Maureen Smith of Melbourne Beach revealed they held a winning ticket, worth $528.8 million, from the Jan. 13 drawing at the state's lottery headquarters in Tallahassee.

They posed for photos with an oversized check after opting to claim their share in a lump sum payment.

"It's still like a 'pinch me,'" said Kaltschmidt, 55. "It is just so overwhelming."

Kaltschmidt said he planned to retire from his job as a manufacturing engineer. Smith, 70, a homemaker, said her age was a factor in the decision to take the immediate payment.

The ticket was purchased at a Publix supermarket in Melbourne Beach on Florida's central east coast. The other winning tickets were sold in Tennessee and California.

Kaltschmidt and Smith called the decisions arising from their good fortune stressful and said they had told their family only within the past week. As for their spending plans, Kaltschmidt said he needed a new car and Smith wanted to get a massage.

"We are not going to go partying," she said.

A Tennessee couple with another of the winning tickets quickly came forward last month, announcing they would take their share in an immediate cash payment and planned to keep their jobs.

The third winning ticket was sold at a 7-Eleven store in Chino Hills, California, according to the state's lottery, and officials still are waiting for someone to come forward with it. REUTERS

Privacy versus law

The ruling was a topic of discussion on the presidential campaign trail on Wednesday.

A court order demanding that Apple Inc. help the U.S. government unlock the encrypted iPhone of one of the San Bernardino shooters opens a new chapter in the legal, political and technological fight pitting law enforcement against civil liberties advocates and major tech companies.

The government argues that the phone is a crucial piece of evidence in investigating one of the worst attacks in the United States by people who sympathized with Islamist militants. But privacy groups warn that forcing companies to crack their own encryption endangers the technical integrity of the Internet and threatens not just the privacy of customers but potentially citizens of any country.

A federal judge in Los Angeles on Tuesday ordered Apple to provide "reasonable technical assistance" to investigators seeking to read the data on an iPhone 5C that had been used by Rizwan Farook, who along with his wife, Tashfeen Malik, killed 14 people and wounded 22 others on Dec. 2 in San Bernardino, California.

Both were killed in a shootout with police. The Federal Bureau of Investigation has been investigating the couple's potential communications with Islamic State and other militant groups, and argued that it needs access to the iPhone to find out more.

White House spokesman Josh Earnest said the Department of Justice was asking Apple for access to just one device, a central part of the government's argument, which Apple CEO Tim Cook has said was "simply not true."

Representatives of several other tech companies did not immediately respond to requests for comment on the ruling.

> "They are not asking Apple to redesign its product or to create a new backdoor to one of their products."
> Earnest told reporters

Most technology security experts, including many who have served in government, see technical efforts to provide government access to encrypted devices inevitably brings in law enforcement. The argument has been made on-and-off since the 1990s, when the government tried and failed to force tech companies to incorporate a special chip into their products for surveillance purposes.

"The government sug-

gests this tool could only be used once, on one phone," Cook said in a statement on Tuesday. "But that's simply not true. Once created, the technique could be used over and over again, on any number of devices."

If the federal judge, Magistrate Sheri Pym, rejects Apple's arguments, the Cupertino, California-based company can appeal her order to the district court, and then up the chain to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco and ultimately the U.S. Supreme Court.

The 9th Circuit is known to be pro-privacy. "The government ultimately will have an uphill fight," said Robert Cattanach, a former Justice Department lawyer who advises companies on cyber security issues.

American Civil Liberties Union staff attorney Alex Abdo said the government's request risked a "dangerous" precedent. "The Constitution does not permit the government to force companies to hack into their customers' devices," he said.

Donald Trump, the front-runner for the Republican Party's nomination to run in the Nov. 8 election, said on Fox News Channel's "Fox & Friends" program that Apple's resistance to encryption stems from "ridiculous hysteria ... about privacy and the government."

Number of victims in Maryland school sex abuse case rises to 17

The Prince George's County school board is facing a class-action lawsuit over the allegations.

The number of victims has risen to 17 in a Maryland child pornography case involving a volunteer teacher charged with filming sexually explicit videos in an elementary school restroom, police said on Wednesday.

Deonte Carraway, 22, was arrested this month and charged with directing videos involving at least 10 children during the school day at Judge Sylvania Woods Elementary School in Glenarden, a Washington suburb.

Carraway PRINCE GEORGE'S COUNTY POLICE

Prince George's County Police Department spokeswoman Julie Parker said on Twitter that 17 victims had been confirmed and that the investigation was continuing.

Police were notified after a father discovered pornographic images on his son's phone. They said about 40 videos have been found showing children ranging in age from 9 to 13 performing sexual acts on each other or alone as Carraway instructed them.

In addition to videos made in the restroom, Carraway, who was a choir leader, also filmed minors at a municipal center and public pool complex, as well as in private homes, police have said.

Carraway faces 10 counts of child pornography, as well as charges of sexual abuse and sexual offense. He is being held on a $1 million bond.

Police have said the investigation is expected to last several months. The Federal Bureau of Investigation is involved. REUTERS

Feet Hurt? Bunions? Hammertoes? Heel Pain?

Platelet Rich Plasma Therapy (PRP)

A new approach for treating Tendon Injuries for the Achilles, Tendonitis and Plantar Fasciitis (Heel and Arch Pain)

Take The Foot Health Checkup

- My toenails are streaked, discolored and thickened.
- The sides of my toenails dig into the skin and hurt.
- I have a large bump behind my big toe (or little toe) which is always red.
- I get an extremely painful "cramp" in the area of my third and fourth toes when wearing shoes.
- My toes aren't straight– they are all cocked-up, bent and hurt.
- I have painful calluses on the ball of my foot which keep building up.
- I have corns on my toes which get thick no matter what shoe size I wear.
- The bottom of my heel hurts all day, but it's worse when I step out of bed in the morning.
- I have cramps in my legs which always happen when I walk the same distance.
- My ankles are swollen most of the time.
- My feet are always dry and scaly – sometimes they itch.
- My feet just hurt all over when I stand or walk a lot.
- I have numbness, burning, infection, persistent pain, skin rash, or open sores.

US extremist groups surge in 2015, research group says

Extremist groups proliferated in the United States in 2015, a U.S. research group said on Wednesday, as ideologically driven violence and incendiary political rhetoric created fertile conditions for white supremacists and other fringe actors.

The Southern Poverty Law Center said the number of far-right "hate groups" grew to 892 in 2015 from 784 the year before, spurred by battles over the Confederate flag, gay marriage, immigration and Islamic terrorism.

The SPLC also reported an increase in armed citizen militias, to 998 in 2015 from 874 the year before, as antigovernment activists were energized by land-use clashes with the federal government in the West and fears the Obama administration may tighten gun laws.

On the other end of the political spectrum, black separatist groups advocating anti-Semitic views grew to 180 chapters last year, up from 113 in 2014, according to the SPLC. Unlike activists in the Black Lives Matter movement who have sought to reduce police violence, black separatist groups like Israel United in Christ have advocated anti-Semitic and anti-white views.

Not all extremist movements have flourished. Established neo-Nazi groups like the National Alliance and the Aryans Nations have been hobbled by financial woes and leadership battles, the SPLC said.

But the number of Ku Klux Klan chapters more than doubled to 190 from 72, the SPLC said, invigorated by more than 300 rallies after the state of South Carolina took down the Confederate battle flag from its capitol grounds in the wake of a June massacre of nine African-American churchgoers in Charleston. Miley don't need no prenup

How good is Miley Cyrus feeling about her rekindled relationship with former — or is it current? — fiance Liam Hemsworth?

So good that she's reportedly ready to walk down the aisle with him without bothering to sign a prenup first, according to Radar Online.

Her family, though, thought that would be a terrible idea and stepped in to get her to slow down. Way to show your anti-Australian bias, Cyrus family.

"Miley does not see what those around her see," a source says. "Miley's family and management team is not going to let her marry Liam without an ironclad prenup in place."

Now, you might be wondering why they'd be worried, since Hemsworth has all that "Hunger Games" cash stashed away, but apparently Cyrus is estimated to be worth nearly $200 million. OK, I can see why they might be worried.

Bachelor Jake responds to latest contestant death

With the news this week that a second contestant from Season 14 of "The Bachelor," Lex McAllister, had died from an apparent suicide, it was only a matter of time before that season's Bachelor, Jake Pavelka, broke his silence on the matter. "I'm so sad to hear about Alexa. Such a beautiful girl," he tweets. "My heart breaks for her family. Covering them in prayer during this rough time." McAllister was rushed to the hospital in Columbus, Ohio, on Saturday after ingesting "a lot" of pills and died Tuesday. In 2013, fellow contestant Gia Allemand died after hanging herself.

Alison Brie and "Saturday Night Live's" Colin Jost appear in the film version of the bestseller "How to Be Single." JOJO WHILDEN

Alison Brie can't stop talking about Dave Franco

The "How to Be Single Star" talks about not being single anymore.

NED EHRBAR
@Nedrick
ned.ehrbar@metro.us

Alison Brie may play a single-minded singleton hell-bent on finding the perfect husband in "How to Be Single," but it's a far cry from her own approach to matrimony — until recent developments in her personal life, that is.

"I've never really wanted to get married, so it was not something that I was ever stressed out about. It was not a priority for me," she says. "The guys were always kind of around because I didn't care about them so much. I've not had trouble dating. It's just marriage was never a priority for me, and I may have just been fine never getting married except that, you know, I fell madly in love and then thought, 'Oh, I guess I could be married to you.'"

That falling madly in love happened with Dave Franco, her fiance and the younger brother of James Franco. And happily, their courtship and relationship bear little resemblance to the hell Brie's character puts herself through in the film, which sees her testing out an algorithm she devised to game the online dating system.

"We did not meet online. I've never done online dating," she says. So was it at a bar, then? "Not quite, but it's pretty close. We met at a restaurant, through a mutual friend, in New Orleans at Mardi Gras. At that time I consider the whole city a bar, so sort of."

Brie admits she felt like Franco was the one pretty soon after getting together — by her standards, at least. "There was a semi-immediate click. Probably about a year into our relationship I was like, 'Oh wow, this thing I thought I maybe never would do, I could definitely see myself doing it with you,'" she says of opening up to the idea of marriage. "And it felt supereasy and natural, and I think that's probably how it should feel."

Entering the "The Room"

Before Brie and Franco can tie the knot, they got some on-the-job time in together. They appear in "The Disaster Artist," the retelling of the making of "The Room," Tommy Wiseau's infamously terrible film. They just finished shooting it, with Dave playing Greg Sestero, the poor guy who got roped into Wiseau's plan. Dave's brother James, who also directed, plays the other role, with Brie as his girlfriend.

Joseph Fiennes goes to gladiator school

The actor is really happy that the Jesus in his new film "Risen" isn't Caucasian.

NED EHRBAR
@Nedrick
ned.ehrbar@metro.us

In "Risen," Joseph Fiennes plays a centurion who doubts the divinity of Jesus. ROSIE COLLINS

Joseph Fiennes is apparently looking to court controversy these days. When he's not defending his decision to portray Michael Jackson in an upcoming British made-for-TV movie, he's discussing the religious and racial politics of his new film, "Risen," in which he stars as a Roman officer charged with investigating the death of Jesus Christ to prove he's not the messiah. Oh, and in the movie — for once — Jesus isn't a white guy.

GETTY IMAGES

This is basically two different movies in one, going from a procedural to a religious film.
Certainly the appeal for me was taking a narrative that many of us know so well. I'm not giving anything away by saying it picks up kind of where Mel Gibson left off in that we start at the crucifixion, resurrection and ascension. Which is a pretty tall order to get into one movie. But what I loved was it takes the stigma off it being a Bible movie by giving our main protagonist the journey — and that main protagonist being a non-believer, being a Roman tribune who's there to put down these insurrections. The narrative being carried through the eyes of a nonbeliever is brilliant to me.

The steps of the investigation felt very methodical and detective-like.
I took the opportunity to sit with a detective for a day because it was structured with these interrogations. So I tried to borrow — from a modern perspective — how you would interrogate, and it seemed to me it probably wouldn't have changed much. Just being threatening. [Laughs] Also, I went to gladiator school, which helped me in terms of precision and warfare and the way they fought.

What's the first day of gladiator school like?
Bruises, bruises. I mean, I really was like, "Ow! Ow!" They're wonderful guys, but they're hardened alpha-males.

Is putting on the Roman centurion uniform some sort of rite of passage for British actors?
Yeah, it is. [Laughs] Look at that, six-packs instantaneously! I felt like such a loser at the end of the day taking it off. The other thing — not to digress or be too humorous — is how did the Roman army nearly take over a huge portion of the world in sandals? I mean, gladiator school was tough enough, but three months in sandals with no socks and no cushion was brutal.

Speaking of brutality, while it's not "The Passion of the Christ," your crucifixion scene is no picnic.
Yeah, and they even toned it down. I think they had to edit it, as it was pretty graphic. It was very moving on the day, just in terms of seeing somebody strung up like that. It's not the greatest look. And we had some amazing extras, some of whom were 80-something years old. They just had amazing responses to it. It was pretty intense.

You also have a non-white Jesus, which is still rare in film and TV.
No, he's not Caucasian. I feel like nobody's really mentioned this. I mean, there's such a furor with the Oscars — and I'm not going to wade into any of that — but just in terms of casting, yes this is a big step forward just in terms of getting the casting right and moving away from the golden, blue-eyed boy and delivering the right type of casting. It's brilliant. I'm really proud of that.

Making a case for being picky

New York Times film critic A.O. Scott praises his profession in the book "Better Living Through Criticism."

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

A.O. Scott doesn't have a popular job. Since 2000, he's written about the arts, and mostly about movies, for The New York Times, graduating to chief film critic in 2004. His is a profession of sometimes savage opinions that often inspire savage opinions from others. Scott confronts many of the arguments against his trade in his first book, "Better Living Through Criticism: How to Think About Art, Pleasure, Beauty and Truth." Scott talks to us about the changing nature of his job and not wanting to rest on his laurels as a writer for a renowned publication.

The other day you tweeted out a message from Tom Green congratulating you on the book, which gave you the opportunity to post your old positive review for his film "Freddy Got Fingered." You wrote one of the few nonhostile pieces about it.

At the time even Tom Green was fairly shocked to have a positive review in The New York Times. They didn't use the quote in the ads. It wasn't the image they wanted to project. That review has stuck around, and people have maybe taken another look at the movie. Some have put on the DVD and turned it off after 10 minutes, because they're just appalled at what they see. Other people may think, "Oh, there's something going on here. This might be art."

A lot of pieces praising film criticism tend to be very defensive. This is more positive.

New York Times film critic A.O. Scott's first book is "Better Living Through Criticism," now in bookstores. CARMEN HENNING

I didn't want to write a book that was just a defense of my job, that said I should be allowed to keep it and I'm very important. Some people might assume or think that's what the book is. But it's not about criticism as a profession, though there's certainly stuff that talks about its history and its future. It's more about criticism as an activity, as part of the larger cultural product of making and evaluating art and figuring out our place in the world. This book is not an instruction manual on how to do criticism. It's more like an encouragement to figure out how to do it.

This is a general question, but as someone who came to film criticism from book reviewing, what attracts you to writing about movies specifically?

One is the range of stuff you get to write about. When you write about books, you write 90 percent of the time about a narrow range of what's being published. The amazing thing about writing about movies is you take it all in. You write about big commercial movies, you write about genre movies, you write about kids' movies, you write about documentaries, you write about foreign-language films. Every week you get this extraordinary range to write about.

And the movies you see are about everything. Roger Ebert said that movies are about every aspect of human life. You get to say something about politics or sex or love or religion. I don't really know how to write about those things directly. I'm not a political pundit or a historian or a memoirist. But I can dabble in all those things as a film critic. It's not just that there's a great variety of movies, but every movie that's worth writing about contains within itself very complex and rich information and ideas about life.

The BowTie

How many steps is that? ALL PHOTOS PROVIDED

Wonder what your pooch is up to all day? There's an app for that.

WonderWoof, a Bluetooth device shaped like a bow tie, attaches to a collar and tracks your pup's every move on the WonderWoof app. Dog owners will know when their pet is running, sleeping, playing or dreaming.

Betsy Fore, 29, came up with the idea while in London. "It was all about my little fur baby," says Fore of her dog. "He was a little overweight [and] when I looked at the market there was nothing really out there for him."

When Fore put the first WonderWoof BowTie on her own pet — it was just a little black box back then — she saw positive results. "Over the course of time wearing it, he did begin to lose weight. And when he reached his goal weight, this increased his life up to two years," says Fore.

The product monitors a dog's health by taking into account the traits of 13,000 breeds, as well as the pet's age and size. Its tracker and pedometer connect to the app, which charts the dog's activity. Pet and owner are rewarded with virtual "bones" when a goal is reached.

"Monitoring caloric intake will be in the next update," Fore says. "How much they eat is just as important as how much exercise they get."

The dream, according to Fore, is having the ability to alert pet owners to a pet's illness. "That's what we're going to be working on," reports Fore. "The BowTie will tell you if your dog is sleeping too much or drinking too much and it'll send these alerts directly to the vet."

But what about your beloved feline? WonderMeow was recently this past month and plans to launch for retail soon. WonderMeow's goal is different from WonderWoof. "It's more about tracking your cats' secret lives," she explains. "There's a little camera set up [and] you can set up your cat's personality."

The camera will take snapshots of where a cat is slinking off to during the day. Fore adds, "It's about them being the director of their own adventure."

WonderWoof is available for online purchase at WonderWoof.com for $95.

Hip Arthritis Treatments Keeping Boomers Active Into Their 60's, 70's Even 80's?

If you suffer with painful hip arthritis and want medical options to surgery – science may have finally found the possible solution you've been looking for.

Here is why: Arthritis develops from failure of internal cells of the joint to produce Synovial Fluid which cushions the joint. Then, wear-and-tear over time can cause the joint to "dry out" and grind down the protective cartilage leading to pain, inflammation and immobility. Let it go too long and your only option may be complete surgical replacement of the hip.

But...researchers and doctors have discovered all-natural gel like medicines that are like "joint oil" and can be used to supplement the joint which is drying out... much like adding oil to an automobile. This all-natural gel is quite similar to the naturally occurring lubricating substances in the hip joint. When doctors precisely place this lubricating gel into your hip joint – always with the use of a advanced medical imaging - it is like putting oil on a rusty door hinge. It cushions the joint and can decrease pain and promote healing. This is not cortisone and has no side effects. For some, results can be dramatic and last for months - if not longer. The earlier you treat the hip, the better chance it can help you.

Know this: This is NOT a supplement you can buy over the counter or on the internet. This is a REAL medical treatment that must be given by a health care professional with advanced medical technology only.

And the great news is: You can find out if you are a candidate for this advanced medical procedure with our No-Obligation Risk-Free Hip Pain Screening at Downtown NYC Medical. To find out more and schedule your free screening appointment, simply call 800-879-7343

Beer Week is back

New York City's celebration of small-batch suds offers a taste of the creativity and local ingredients right in your neighborhood.

EVA KIS
@thisiskis
eva.kis@metro.us

If you think the phrase "craft beer" has been watered down, ask Kelly Taylor about it.

"The term 'craft beer' has been used almost to death over the last few years," says Taylor, president of the NYC Brewers Guild, which promotes the city's craft breweries. Friday begins his busiest time of the year: New York City Beer Week, which is actually 10 days of events all about the small-batch brews being made around the city.

The message is the same at every one of the 400 or so tastings, talks, dinners, tap takeovers and more taking place through Feb. 28. "To a certain degree, we're trying to reassert what it means to be a craft beer," Taylor continues. "It's made with a certain purpose and a certain degree of character that comes out in the beer, and it's gotta be presented in a way that elevates the discourse."

To that end, Beer Week is all about getting beer fans face-to-face with brewers and more knowledgeable about the huge variety of beers being turned out by local producers — the guild has 23 member breweries and several more that don't have a permanent facility (yet).

At Greenpoint's Keg & Lantern brewpub alone, Patrick Allen turned out more than 90 varieties of beer from the three barrels in the basement. "I don't want to get bored," Allen says about the turnover, which sees ingredients like cilantro (inspired by the nachos served upstairs) and mushrooms make it into his brews. "The whole fact that I'm enjoying it is the creativity."

Keg & Lantern didn't start out that way — the bar used to serve mostly the mass-market beers preferred by the Polish and Korean after-work crowd. It took time, and a lot of experimentation, for Allen to win over the clientele. Now, almost all of the taps are his own brews, which are only available at the bar.

"The people that make the craft beer, their personalities come out in the beer," says Taylor, who is also the co-founder and brewer at Brooklyn's KelSo Beer Co. "They're always trying to make something that's got a little bit of a twist to it, a hook, a flavor, a depth of character. Every brewer has got their fingerprint that gets put on the beer."

Patrick Allen

A great way to get a sense of that during Beer Week is on opening day, when 12 breweries across the city will be tapping their SMaSH (state malts and state hops) challenge brews all day long. These beers were all made using the same New York state ingredients, created from concept to tap in about six weeks.

But just because there's a ton of individuality among brewers doesn't mean trends don't emerge. Right now, fully a quarter of all craft beer being sold nationally is an IPA. Credit some of that to East Coast brewers, who have been tempering the hops' bitterness, says Allen. Though his Green Eyes IPA, one of only two beers that Keg & Lantern always keeps on tap, has the dry, clear and bitter style of the West Coast, he's been trying out the new "softer, juicier" methods as well.

Whichever you prefer, malt is far from out of style. A good IPA still needs a good malt behind it. "If it's played right," Taylor says, "you don't notice it."

A 'Snow White' dark as the night

Company XIV's latest production evokes our primal instincts.

T. MICHELLE MURPHY
@TMichelleMurphy
tmichelle.murphy@metro.us

German cabaret meets Baroque burlesque in "Snow White." STEVEN TRUMON GRAY

In a smoky room, as low music plays, audience members sip champagne while lithe dancers strut across the stage in fishnets and little else. There's no curtain to raise at Minetta Lane Theatre, and no hidden wings. Performers transform openly for "Snow White," pinning on their wigs and whispering privately together, blurring reality and fantasy.

"Our shows are an outlet for drama and emotional abandon," says Austin McCormick, artistic director of Company XIV, which has been retelling myths, folklore and fairy tales with a provocative edge for 10 years.

"This production was largely inspired by German cabaret, weaving in our signature 'Baroque burlesque' style," he continues. "It's a classic winter show, so I wanted to go darker with it."

Hand-held digital cameras follow the evil queen (founding member Laura Careless), paparazzi style, in her quest for perfect beauty. "It contrasts our more antique influences onstage and creates a voyeuristic experience," McCormick says.

With all Company XIV shows, the sets are minimal save for evocative pieces like a carousel horse and spiral staircase. The costumes are all gothic romance: corsets and garters, glittering pasties and leather gags. The opulence is amplified by aerial stunts, live opera, ballet and even puppetry.

Off-Broadway or not, this is one of the most unique shows in the city. Like "Sleep No More" on a single ingenuous stage, it's a bold statement on what theater arts can be in 2016.

BAM's bewitching film fest

"The Craft" COLUMBIA PICTURES

More than any other scary monster, the witch has changed throughout the ages. Once, they were deployed to oppress women who strayed from societal norms; at other times they were there to empower them against horrible men. Both sides — and many more besides — can be seen in Witches' Brew, BAM's sprawling and diverse survey of the best (or at least the most guiltily entertaining) in she-beast cinema.

Inspired by this weekend's severely spooky new instant classic "The Witch," the series goes all the way back to the nutso 1922 silent documentary "Haxan: Witchcraft Throughout the Ages," which pairs a history lesson with some of the craziest imagery of the period (or ever). Touching on every era since, the lineup spans from high art to deep camp. It's surely the only series to ever pair Carl Theodor Dreyer's austere, apocalyptic "Day of Wrath" with the cult hit "Hocus Pocus," to say nothing of the about-to-be-remade 1996 teen romp "The Craft." Mike Birbiglia taught us how to deal with the anxiety of shifting life out of neutral with "Sleepwalk with Me" back in 2008. Known for making light of his own life, the comedian changes tactics to ask how far a joke can go in the modern world with his new one-man show.

JOAN MARCUS

CULTURAL

Russian Banya Fest

Feb. 18, 8-11 p.m.
Sadoony Spa, 1158 McDonald Ave., Brooklyn
$75, Atlasobscura.com
If anyone knows how to cope with the cold, it's the Russians. Learn how to conquer your winter blues at the Obscura Society's Banya Fest — a day of swimming, steaming, wining and dining like they do in the old country. Bring a bathing suit and prepare to eat traditional Russian fare and sip vodka while learning about bathhouse culture and dancing to the Soviet pop of the '60s by Svetlana and the Eastern Blokhedz.

THEATER

Broadway Unlocked

Feb. 22, 7 p.m.
WNYC's The Greene Space, 44 Charlton St.
$100-$225, Broadwayunlocked.com
Theater breaks the physical boundaries between New York City and the rest of the world by taking over YouTube for a night of singing, performances and concerts by the actors and behind-the-scenes staff of Broadway. This year stars Kyle Dean Massey of "Nashville" along with artists like Ali Stroker ("Glee"), Lilla Crawford ("Into the Woods") and "Smash" songwriter Drew Gasparini.

DRINKS

Nintendo World closed a month ago for major renovations and will reopen as Nintendo NY on Friday at noon with a ribbon-cutting ceremony, but the festivities go on all weekend, including a meet-and-greet with the voice of Mario, Charles Martinet, giveaways, character appearances, exclusive merchandise and the chance to play upcoming games before they're releases — perhaps on the new 15-foot gaming screen?

DANCE PARTY

Lunch Break

Feb. 23, 1-2 p.m.
Marquee, 289 10th Ave.
Free with RSVP, Thehookup.flavorpill.com
Morning raves sound like fun, but mornings have this terrible habit of happening early. So Marquee is bringing back its lunchtime dance parties beginning this month. Lunch Break is an hour of midday grooving with beats by Questlove, and depending on what kind of a day you're having both Perrier and Deep Eddy Vodka drinks will be served. And because you'll probably have to show something for having skipped out of the office for an hour, partiers will receive a bagged lunch on the way out.

COMING SOON

American Dreams

Begins March 2, Wednesday-Sunday 7:30 & 9:30 p.m.
Tickets on sale Feb. 19 at noon
Dominique Ansel Kitchen, 137 Seventh Ave. South
$85, Dominiqueanselkitchen.com
Each generation of Americans has their own version of the ultimate dream. Rarely would today's obsession with social media stardom be acknowledged in the same breath as the California Gold Rush. Maybe it's because chef Dominique Ansel is a French immigrant, and all the dreaming before and after arriving in the United States that comes with it, that he's taken an inclusive approach with American Dreams, his next dessert tasting menu. The second themed experience at his after-hours dining room U.P. will span a century's worth of national hopes and ambitions over seven courses (with $45 optional drink pairings).

5 Best US ski resorts for the whole family

Make taking the slopes a team effort at one of these top destinations.

Fodor's Travel

Take advantage of the winter weather with one of these five resorts. ISTOCK

We've all heard that the family who plays together stays together. Even if a clan contains all types — from shredders to spa-lovers — the slopes can offer wintry entertainment for varying activities, skill levels and tastes. The following resorts across the country have a reputation for being especially kind to kin. Not only will kids of all ages find happiness at these spots, there's plenty for parents to enjoy, too.

Beaver Creek Resort

Where: Beaver Creek, Colorado
The promise of hot chocolate on the mountaintop in the morning and a warm chocolate chip cookie break each afternoon awaits at this picturesque resort. In addition to seemingly endless entertainment options from sleigh riding to shopping to a skating rink, Beaver Creek has been recognized by the National Ski Area Association with an award for overall safety.

Stowe Mountain Resort

Where: Stowe, Vermont
This New England ski area is home to one of the most well-known families in the world: the Von Trapps of "Sound of Music" fame settled in Stowe after they fled Europe. The family continues to run a lodge in town, the Trapp Family Lodge, where families can enjoy miles of cross-country skiing on property, along with activities such as baking classes and yoga. Mount Mansfield lies just minutes down the road. And the famous Ben & Jerry's factory offers tours, and tastings, in nearby Waterbury.

Northstar California Resort

Where: Lake Tahoe, California
The Tahoe Value Pass allows access to three resorts — Heavenly, Kirkwood and Northstar — so there's little risk of becoming bored in Tahoe. Families especially enjoy Northstar for its tubing hill, bungee trampoline, moonlight snowshoe tours and apres-ski activities such as "build-your-own-smores" cookouts right in the village at an outdoor fire pit.

Keystone Resort

Where: Keystone, Colorado
While the snow fort Kidtopia — with its tunnels and climbable exterior — will enchant the little ones, weekend fireworks, parades and mountain lightshows entertain any age at the snowy western respite of Keystone. Snow biking, snowcat tours and a horse-drawn wagon rides to dinner in a rustic cabin amp up the usual seasonal fun.

Deer Valley

Where: Park City, Utah
Who wouldn't be impressed by slopes where you can ski side-by-side with an Olympian? Live the dream at Deer Valley. Be sure to give Heidi Voelker, who will be on the premises all winter, a wave when she swishes by (or maybe ask her for tips). NASTAR onsite ski racing provides another great reason to rub elbows with the athletes.

For even more family-friendly and gorgeous ski resorts, including Big Sky Resort where skiers can watch dogs sledding and Taos Ski Valley, which boasts a state-of-the-art children's center, go to Fodors.com.

NO ROOKIE WALL FOR PORZINGIS, EXPECT HIS NUMBERS TO JUMP

FANTASY SPORTS

ADAM LEVITAN
alevitan@metro.us

Carmelo Anthony will likely get a ton of rest in the second half of the season, opening the door for big Kristaps Porzingis nights. GETTY IMAGES

There are "only" two months left in the NBA season. That's an eternity in fantasy basketball terms.

Values will shift a lot over the next 60 days as Thursday's NBA trade deadline passes. Certain teams will go into full tank mode and others go into playoff prep mode. The players making a difference in head-to-head fantasy matchups now will give way to guys coming from off the radar. Glaring examples that come to mind include Tobias Harris' second-half eruption in 2013, Kenneth Faried in 2014 and Rudy Gobert last season.

Some candidates to go off in the second half this year:

Rookie no more

The Lakers are in last place, yet coach Byron Scott removed No. 2 overall pick D'Angelo Russell from the starting lineup and played him just 27.1 minutes per game in the first half. That can't last. Scott's insane treatment of Russell — which has included sharp criticism in the media — has to give way to a far bigger role down the stretch. Even Scott has said he expects Russell to rejoin the starting five after the All-Star break. The rookie's per-36 numbers include 16.2 points, 4.8 rebounds, 4.4 assists, 2.0 treys and 1.6 steals.

Carmelo in the gallows

There's plenty of reason to believe Carmelo Anthony will miss a bunch of time down the stretch. The free-falling Knicks are now 23-32, 12th in the Eastern Conference. Melo also continues to battle seemingly chronic issues with the left knee he had surgically repaired 12 months ago. When he sat this year, Langston Galloway has averaged 30.1 minutes while Derrick Williams has filled in well off the bench by averaging 13.4 points per game. Kristaps Porzingis and Arron Afflalo also see major usage bumps whenever Anthony sits.

Free Bobby Portis

If you're not on Twitter, you might not realize there's already a #freebobbyportis movement going on. That's because he has nightly double-double upside if given the opportunity.

NBA pickups of the week

Luol Deng, F, Heat
Chris Bosh's calf issue sounds serious. The Heat would be forced to lean more on Deng offensively if Bosh is done for the year.

Jeff Green, F, Grizzlies
Zach Randolph is the main beneficiary of the Marc Gasol injury, but Green's role will expand sharply as well due to more minutes at the four.

Al Jefferson, C, Hornets
Sounds close to returning from knee scope. Even if Big Al is a shell of himself, he'll be a solid contributor on a team that just lost Michael Kidd-Gilchrist again.

NFL news

Marcus Mariota ran with the football just 2.8 times per game as a rookie, well off Cam Newton's 8.3, Russ Wilson's 6.4 and even Alex Smith's 5.3. That's a crime for someone with Mariota's running ability. Mike Mularkey, who has officially taken over for Ken Whisenhunt, appears to understand that as he talked up more designed runs going forward. With a rising stud in Dorial Green-Beckham and a reliable workhorse in Delanie Walker, Mariota easily has a top-5 QB ceiling.

NHL power rankings | by Rich Slate

No. 1

Capitals (41-10-4)

Washington has set a new NHL mark for the best record through 55 games after Tuesday's 3-1 win over Los Angeles. Indeed, regular-season history is well within the grasp of this very dominant group. No doubt, it's Stanley Cup or bust in D.C.

No. 2

Stars (37-15-6)

They might have lost, 2-1, to the Blues in overtime on Tuesday but at the moment, Dallas is back on top in the mighty Western Conference. The Stars are still 7-2-1 in their last 10 games and they have scored the most goals (188) in the NHL. Their plus-32 goal-differential is the best in the West.

No. 3

'Hawks (37-18-5)

The Blackhawks are only one point behind the Stars but Dallas has played in two fewer games. Chicago dropped in the standings since it is 5-4-1 in its last 10. But the Blackhawks took out some frustration on the poor Maple Leafs on Monday, dishing out a ruthless 7-2 beating.

No. 4

Blues (33-17-9)

If they were in the Atlantic Division or Pacific, St. Louis would be comfortably in first place. Instead, in the loaded Central, they find themselves in third behind Dallas and Chicago. Keep in mind that they pulled within five points of the Stars thanks to defenseman Kevin Shattenkirk's OT tally.

No. 5

Panthers (33-18-6)

The biggest surprise in the NHL so far this season continues to perform well. The Panthers still lead the Atlantic Division and they have the second best goal-differential (plus-26) in the East behind the Capitals. They are 6-3-1 in their last 10 games after Monday's 2-1 shootout win over Pittsburgh.

No. 6

Rangers (32-18-6)

After some subpar play, the real Rangers have seemingly returned (7-2-1 in their last 10 games). They got their top defenseman, Ryan McDonagh (7 goals, 19 assists, plus-13), back Wednesday night against the Blackhawks. They're ready to make a run at this thing.

No. 7

Kings (33-20-3)

For most of the season, the Pacific Division title looked like a foregone conclusion for the Kings. Not so much anymore as Anaheim has closed to within three points of suddenly struggling LA. The Kings wrap up an ugly road trip in St. Louis on Thursday and Nashville on Saturday.

No. 10

Islanders (30-19-6)

The Isles are only four points behind the Rangers, so that will be a nice battle down the stretch for second place in the Metro Division. New York will get another shot at Washington on Thursday as it hosts the Caps at Barclays Center. The Isles are 19-8-3 in their new digs.

Punchline Prokhorov

One day after it was reported that the Nets had offered their vacant GM job to Spurs assistant Sean Marks, Nets owner Mikhail Prokhorov had some deadpan responses when asked why Marks may have turned down the job. "I have never heard his name before," Prokhorov said of Marks. When later asked about the Knicks, Prokhorov said, "I have never heard about this team." GETTY IMAGES

Aries Do what needs to be done without wasting your time trying to get others to take action. You will be far more effective if you work alone. Romance looks promising.

Taurus You'll have to put more energy behind your plans if you want to see them come to fruition. Use emotional tactics to motivate others to pitch in and help.

Gemini Be honest about what you can accomplish. If you don't set unrealistic goals, others will see your vision and help you reach it. Love is in the stars.

Cancer Mull over your experiences and make a mental note of what not to do in the future. You can spare yourself grief if you eliminate problems before they escalate.

Leo Gather information, travel or have a conversation that will help you get a better handle on your current status. Think carefully about how to move forward.

Virgo If you express your feelings, you will find out exactly where you stand. Once you have your position quantified, you will know how to speed things up.

Libra Get out with friends. Flirting and being playful with someone special will improve your relationship and help you come one step closer to positive changes.

Scorpio Participate. Don't be afraid to do things on your own, rather than waste time arguing with someone who doesn't want to contribute to your plans.

Sagittarius Connect with people who want to collaborate and share in your pursuits. New friendships will help you build a brighter future.

Capricorn You'll be reminded of someone or something from your past that can help you handle a challenge you face at home. Making an effort to be entertaining will be rewarded.

Aquarius Simplicity, precision and experimentation will help you achieve balance and success. Your enthusiasm will be infectious and will promote positive change.

Pisces Don't share your secrets. Focus on personal improvements and modify an old method of doing things with a trendy new twist. EUGENIA LAST
